

A Kipling of the Oldest Profession

We first read of Emma in 1839.

Two watermen named Hunt and Fawcett, are in custody on a charge of robbing an "unfortunate" female, named Emma Kipling, of a quantity of wearing apparel, on Friday evening last. They went into the house where Miss Kipling resides, and sent her out for something to drink, during which time they ransacked her drawers and made off with a variety of articles, including a chemise, false curls, slips, a petticoat, &c. They are remanded for further examination.

Lincolnshire Chronicle Fri 02 Aug 1839

At the magistrates' meeting yesterday, Edw. Hunt, for stealing wearing apparel from Emma Kipling, was committed for trial at the sessions: Hy. Fawcett, in custody, but having taken no part in the theft, was bound in recognizances to appear as a witness.—Saturday the 23d inst. was

Henry Hunt, 32, was charged with stealing, on the 28th of July, at the parish of St. Martin, a work-box and other articles, the property of Emma Kipling. Not guilty.

Lincolnshire Chronicle - Friday 25 October 1839

In the 1841 census, she describes herself as being of independent means.

We read of her again in 1844 and 1845.

LINCOLN MAGISTRATES' MEETING.—On Saturday last, before E. J. Willson and H. W. Wroot, Esqrs., Emma Kipling was charged with stealing a handkerchief on Tuesday night last from William Gilbert, in the kitchen of the Plough inn, but as it seemed that Gilbert and the lady were on very friendly terms the case was dismissed.—Moses Allcock, a li-

LINCOLN MAGISTRATES' MEETING, Oct. 7.—Before Richard Whitton, Esq., Emma Kipling, single woman, was brought up charged with being intoxicated, and making use of abusive and obscene language in the High-street. She being a very old offender the magistrate sentenced her to 14 days' imprisonment.—Jane Willson, from Newark, was brought up

It is stated that a cyprian named Emma Kipling was treated in a most ruffianly and brutal manner in her own house last Saturday night, by a man named Griffith, who in the course of a quarrel threw the unfortunate creature down and broke one of her legs. The woman has been removed to the Hospital, and it is hoped her brutal assailant will be brought to justice.

Stamford Mercury - Friday 07 March 1845

BRUTAL CONDUCT.—A girl of ill fame, named Emma Kipling, late on Saturday night or early on Sunday morning last, had her leg broken. A fellow of the name of Griffiths was at her house that night, when a quarrel arose between the two, which ended in his breaking her leg by some means or other. We hope the ruffian will meet with his deserts, for, let the girl's conduct be as bad as it may, it does not follow that she is to be ill-treated by every cowardly bully who chooses to vent his ill-humour upon her. The girl is now in the Lincoln County Hospital.

brawl in Broadgate, on the 20th April last.—John Griffiths was charged with assaulting Emma Kipling, on the 2d March last. It appeared Griffiths struck her over the head and knocked her down, using other violence towards her. In the fall her leg was broken. The prisoner then made his escape. Some parties came in and took care of her; an order was afterwards procured, and she was taken to the hospital, in which institution she was kept seven weeks. The magistrates fined the prisoner 5*l.* including costs, and in default of payment he was committed to prison for two calendar months.—Wm. Webb
