A SCENE IN COURT.

Julia Kipling, domestic servant of Laurel-cottage, Wareside, was charged with having persistently annoyed Robert Brewster, of Clyne-cottage, Victoria-road, New Barnet, by knocking at his gate on the previous evening.—Mr D. Blleloch appeared for the prosecutor. In opening the case he said the accused resided at Ware, but some years ago was in the service of Mr Brewster. Since her leaving, the cause of which he need not go into, she had sent the most vile and scurrilous letters to her former master.—At this point of the proceedings the prisoner uttered a piercing scream, and was removed in a swooning condition to an adjoining room.—Police-inspector S. Sheaf said she had been going on like that all the morning.—The Chairman said the case could not proceed, and the remaining business must be disposed of first.—At the conclusion of the other cases the prisoner was again brought in, provided with a chair and supported by a couple of officers. Her manner was very strange, and she seemed several times on the point of fainting again.—Proceeding, Mr Blleloch said he did not want to labour the case, but he might just say that the annoyance complained of had been carried on for a series of years, and on this occasion it was not till three attempts had been made to induce her to desist that she was given into custody. She appeared to be suffering from religious mania or something of the kind.—Complainant said he was the manager of a dental manufacturing company, which had a depôt at New Barnet. On the previous evening, at eight o'clock, the prisoner came to his residence and persisted in violently slamming the front gates. She eventually came to the front door and asked why she should be spoken to by the police. He asked what was her object in coming at all, and she made no reply. She remained on the doorstep and would not leave, so he at length took her by the shoulders and pushed her along the path and into the road.—Asked if she had anything to ask in regard to this evidence, prisoner said, "It is all false."—P.c. George Saxby said he was sent for on the previous evening to go to a woman who was annoying Mr Brewster, and he corroborated the evidence just taken.—Police-inspector Sheaf said he was called to Mr Brewster's house at 8.30 p.m. on the previous day, and found prisoner slamming the front gate. He told her she was acting very foolishly, and advised her to go away. She replied that she loved Mr Brewster; God knew she loved him better than she loved Jesus Christ. She also made a certain complaint against Mr Brewster, and he (witness) advised her to go and tell her father or friends about it if it was true, but she replied that she could not do so. He managed to persuade her to leave, and afterwards returned to the house of Mr Brewster, who invited him in and showed him a card which he said prisoner had written and thrown over the hedge. While he was there the slamming recommenced, and prisoner came to the door and made a charge against Mrs Brewster, which was somewhat similar to that written on the card which had been handed to the Bench. They got the woman away, but she returned again and was then given into custody. At the police-station she was extremely violent, and after three o'clock that morning none of the neighbours could have had any rest. Dr. Roughton was called in to examine her.—The prisoner said the evidence was false; that as to a charge against Mr Brewster she did not understand. Asked if she would go to the workhouse, she replied in the negative and asked that she might be sent to prison.

—The Magistrate's Clerk said the Bench had no wish to send her to prison and would discharge her if only she would undertake to go home and cease annoying complainant. She replied that she would never go to Mr Brewster's house again but would return at once to Ware.—Inspector Nutt said he would send an officer to see her to the railway station.—On leaving the court the woman again screamed violently, and long after her removal her cries could be distinctly heard in the room. Eventually it was found impossible to induce her to walk away, and she was strapped to the police ambulance and removed to the station where her friends were wired for.

JEALOUSY OF A FORMER HOUSE-KEEPER.

ALFRED PLUMMER, Lyndhurst-road, was summoned for assaulting Julia Kipling, of London-road, on Monday, Aug. 4th.

Mr. Neve appeared for defendant, who pleaded not guilty.

The complainant said she was walking in the London-road on Monday afternoon. She saw defendant and went up to speak to him, but before she could say anything he threw her to the ground. She had been housekeeper to defendant, and he had called the police in when he turned her out. She did not know why he turned her out. She should like to say, before proceeding further, that defendant scarcely ever told the truth.

In reply to Mr. Neve, complainant said she was only just inside defendant's premises. She wished to speak to him. She had been to the house once before that morning, and had been told that defendant was not in. She did not refuse to leave, and she did not wait about outside until he came. She stayed in Lyndhurst-road, but that was on her own business. She wished to see Mr. Plummer to ask him for an explanation, as he had been circulating a false charge against her. The beginning of it was when he invited her to go up herself to fetch some things of hers, which he still retained. She did not refuse to go, when he told her to, on the 5th of March, but he had the police to see that she went. She had not annoyed or followed him about since then. On the 31st of July she went to his business premises, but it was on his invitation.

Mr. Neve said complainant was for some time housekeeper to defendant, and when he was thinking of getting married, in March, of course he told her to go. She refused to go, and he had to put her out, and called the police in. Since then she had continually annoyed him and followed him about. She went to his house and insulted his wife, and on the day in question, when she was told he was not at home, she waited about outside until he came, and then called him a "dirty liar" and smacked him in the face, and he put her off his premises, using no unnecessary force.

Mabel Dudley said she was at Mr. Plummer's house on Monday. Mrs. Kipling came during the morning, and asked if Alfred Plummer was in. Witness told her he was not, but would probably be in about 1 o'clock. She went away, and when she reached the corner of the street witness saw her put her fingers to her nose. Later on, when complainant spoke to Mr. Plummer, she (complainant) was inside the gate, and the gate was shut. She charged him with saying she had taken some of his things, and he denied saying anything of the sort. She then called him "a dirty, rotten liar," and smacked him in the face. He then said he didn't wish to speak to her, and taking her by the right arm he put her outside. He had to use a certain amount of force, because she held on with both hands to the gate, and when she got outside she either fell down, or threw herself down in the gutter, and commenced screaming. Eventually a gentleman took her to a house.

Defendant, in evidence, said he had got nothing whatever that belonged to complainant. Since he had discharged her she had annoyed him continually, following him about, and had also gone up to his house and insulted his wife. On the day in question she was on his premises, and abused him. It was true he had taken hold of her arm and put her outside, but he used no unnecessary force, nor did he strike her. She either fell down or threw herself down outside.

Mr. Neve said it was a case of jealousy.

Complainant said both defendant and his witness (Mabel Dudley) were telling lies.

The Clerk: They don't look like liars.

Complainant: Well, I can assure you they are lies.

The case was dismissed.

A WIFE'S MAINTENANCE.

Charles George Kipling, 48, a jobbing gardener, of Lumble-street, Gospel Oak, was brought up on a warrant and charged with disobedience to an order of this Court made on February 4th to pay 5s a week towards his wife's maintenance. The arrears at the time the warrant was issued amounted to £2 12s.—Sergeant Blake, 75 Y, deposed that he apprehended the prisoner the previous night at Hornsey. The woman was expecting her confinement, and was probably unable to get to the court. She was quite destitute, and had only threepence in her possession the previous night.—The Prisoner (excitedly): She has told falsehoods. I decline to pay. She left me. I will not give her 5s a week.—Mr. Glover: Very well. You are remanded to prison.—Prisoner: Oh, no. I will pay.—The Clerk: And you must pay the fine which the Court imposed in February.—Prisoner: Yes.—Sergeant Blake said that when arrested prisoner had 10s in his possession. Might that be handed to the wife? She was utterly destitute.—The Clerk: It can only be done with his consent.—Prisoner was called back, and Mr. Glover asked if he was willing that the 10s should be given to his wife.—Prisoner: Yes, but ——. —Mr. Glover: That will do. You are remanded.—Sergeant Blake was told to give the money to Mrs. Kipling.

Hendon & Finchley Times - Friday 29 May 1896

A charge against Charles George Kipling, 48, a gardener, for non-payment of 50s arrears under an order to maintain his wife, was adjourned at Highgate. Defendant took his eldest boy to Ipswich, and there put a label on the boy, "to London," and put him in the train. In due course he was found at Liverpool Street by the police, and taken to the workhouse.

Bradford Daily Telegraph - Tuesday 02 June 1896

A NOVELTY IN TRAVELLING.

Some time ago a boy was found in Liverpool-street Station with a ticket on his back, "To London." He had travelled from Ipswich thus labelled. He was taken to the workhouse. His father — Charles George Kipling — was charged at Highgate on Monday with omitting to maintain his wife. It appeared that the defendant had agreed to keep the eldest boy, but, tiring of the arrangement, had sought to rid himself of the responsibility by the expedient already mentioned. The case was adjourned.

Merthyr Times, and Dowlais Times, and Aberdare Echo - Thursday 04 June 1896

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

HIGHGATE.

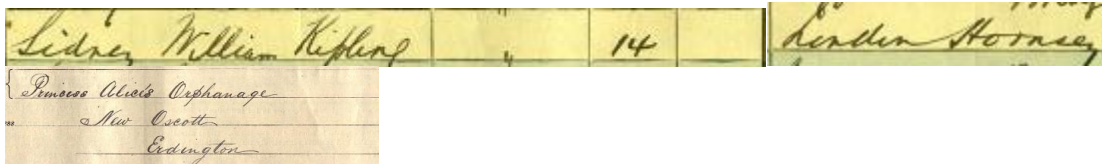

Charles George Kipling, 48, jobbing gardener, Lamble-street, Gospel-oak, was charged on remand with disobedience to an order of the Court to pay to his wife the sum of 10s. a week.—The Prisoner declared that he had only one penny in the world, and that he had only come out of the St. Pancras Workhouse that morning.—The Wife said her husband went into the workhouse with her little boy in order to avoid paying her the money. He earned good wages.—Mr. Bodkin told the Prisoner that the circumstances of the case were fully gone into some time ago, and the Bench made an order, which he had disobeyed. If he did not pay the money he must go to prison.—Prisoner said he could not pay the money. He had lost all his work owing to his wife's conduct. He made a number of accusations against his wife.—Mr. Bodkin: Can you prove adultery against your wife?—Prisoner: Yes, your Worship, I can. He knelt down in the dock and sorted a number of letters, some of which he handed to the Bench.—Mr. Frank Beal said there was nothing in the letters to prove such a charge.—Prisoner was sentenced to a month's imprisonment. He struggled violently as he was being removed, and shouted, "I will not go. I shall go mad. My mother died in a madhouse."—The little boy cried to go to his "daddy." He refused to go with his mother, and the Bench ordered him to be taken to the workhouse.—Kipling, as he was being taken from the Court, said he should write to the Home Secretary.

Christina ('Cissie') was in the National Children's Home at Alverstoke, Hants (#154)

She probably died in Evesham, Worcs. in 1924.

Charles George died in 1936 in Romford district.

It seem likely that William Sidney was living in the West Midlands in 1939 (even though the date of birth differs from that given when he was baptised).

If so, he had married Elsie William in Aston district in 1920. The had children David WH (1921) and Joan E (1922) in Aston district and Donald (1925) and Beryl L (1928) in Birmingham North district

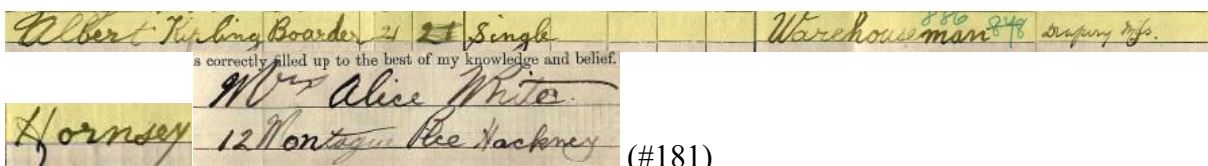

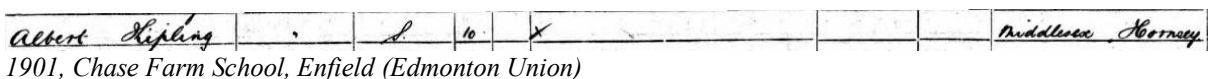

He remarried in 1942 in Birmingham district to Mary Hoblely

William Sydney died in 1968, also in the Birmingham district.

David WH married Beatrice Stevens in 1946 and had three children, including Peter J (1952).. He died in 1984.

Donald married Joan Hanmer in 1952. I have found no evidence of any children of the marriage. He died in Lichfield district in 2001.

Albert Charles

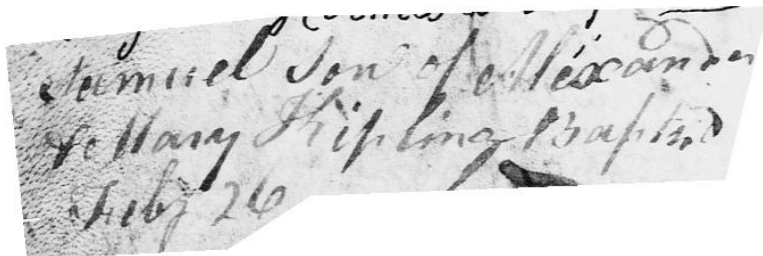

Albert probably died in early 1912.

St Mary le Wigford.

Inquest.—On Tuesday evening, Mr. Hitchins held an inquest in Lincoln, on the body of Mary Kipling, aged 70, who in the course of the afternoon had been drowned in the Sincil-dyke. It appeared that the deceased, who was formerly housekeeper to the late Ald. Wriglesworth, resided with her daughter in a little house in one of the fields near the dyke. In the afternoon she started out to proceed into the city on an errand, taking a can with her. Shortly afterwards, at no great distance from the house, one of her shoes was found by two boys, at the edge of the bank, and the other about half way down to the stream; and near the bridge of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Company, the can was picked up, floating down the stream, which was rather strong. The body was drifted nearly half a mile down, till it arrived almost opposite Mr. Godwin's boat-yard, and there it was got out of the water by Mr. Hylton, who saw something floating, and could not at first tell what it was. It appeared that the deceased for the last two years had been much subject to dizziness and would frequently fall, and that she had several times fallen upon the Great Northern railway and been in great danger. The supposition is that she had walked close to the edge of the bank, (the bank being excessively dirty, and the cleanest part being close to the edge,) and that she fell and rolled down into the stream, her shoes coming off on her falling. In the glove of her left hand was found 1s., which had been given to her to pay for the purchases she was directed to make.—In the absence of all positive evidence as to the way in which she got into the water, the Jury returned a verdict of found drowned.
