Website Update

Full backgrounds to the Brough, Stackholm and Bolam family groups in the 1911 census have been added.

The Bolam Kiplings in particular proved quite tricky, as two or three separate families were living there around 1800 and kept moving around the nearby parishes. Also, a Robert Kipling married a widow, Anne Orton, whose maiden name had been Kipling. Fortunately, this turns out not to have been a case of incest, but of two distant branches of the family coming together. It is likely that one of the families is a branch of the Staindrop Kiplings. One member later move to Kentucky.

One member of the group was later wartime mayor of Durham – right on cue!

One line of the Brough Kiplings had four sons who emigrated to Illinois in the 1850s, having been miners who did not scruple to supplement the pot with a little poached game. Others later migrated to Pennsylvania and, less imaginatively, to Manchester.

Earlier, their father had been named as the father of an illegitimate child

The Kiplings of Stackholm Farm in Lunedale (this Lune being a tributary of the Tees) had earlier farmed in the high Pennines just over the border in Westmorland. 1841 tithe records show the extent of the farm, including a strange isolated field on the peak of a hill.

The outline of some of the fields can still be seen on modern maps.

Stackholm itself was a long way from civilisation, as the records of the local school from 1900 show.

Kiplings in India

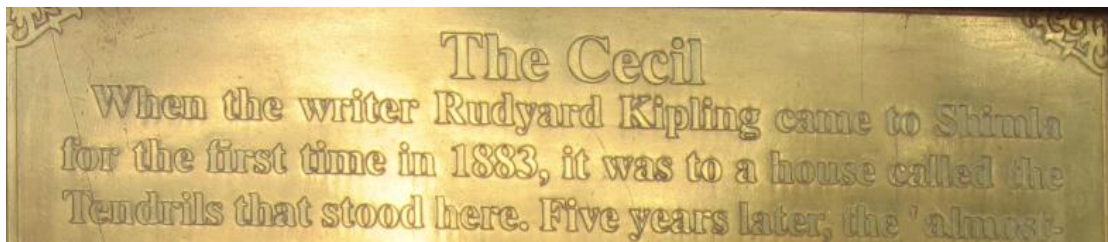

At the end of April, a conference was held at the old Viceregal Lodge in Shimla (formerly Simla) with the title “Kipling in India: India in Kipling”. It was organised jointly by The Kipling Society in the UK and the Indian Institute of Advanced Studies, which are based at the Lodge. As treasurer of the Kipling Society, I was able to attend as an observer. Topics discussed ranged from Rudyard Kipling’s early journalistic career in Lahore and Allahabad, to a very popular Jungle Book ‘anime’ cartoon produced in Japan but dubbed into Hindi.

A Kipling at Jutland

On 31 May 1916, the British and German fleets met in the inconclusive Battle of Jutland. Serving as a stoker aboard HMS Derby was Eric Robert Kipling from the Arkengarthdale family group.

Dublin was a light cruiser with Vice-Admiral David Beatty's cruiser squadron, sinking a destroyer but also receiving considerable damage from incoming fire, although luckily with few casualties. Eric was not one of them and he survived his Navy service, later marrying and having three daughters. He died in 1972.

The first day of the Somme

Private George Kipling, aged 20, of the 9th Battalion King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry (KOYLI) was killed on 1 July 1916, the first day of the Battle of the Somme.

"Prior to Zero Hour (0730) the men from the KOYLI battalions crawled out into no man's land in readiness for their assault. In front of them the German wire had been well cut by the week long artillery bombardment and both battalions made swift progress through the German's front line trenches.

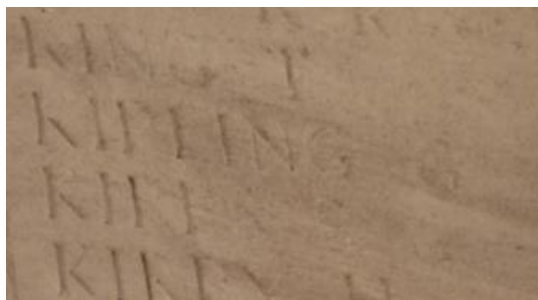

Within 30 minutes they had secured an area around the north of Fricourt village as far as the road to Contalmaison. Here they were held by machine gun fire coming from their front and flanks, and dug in.

To their left the 34th Division's attempt at taking La Boisselle had been repulsed with enormous loss to its Tyneside Brigades. As the 34th Division attempted to remedy the situation the KOYLI found themselves in the unenviable situation of maintaining a position surrounded on three sides”

George was the son of William and Lily Kipling of Carr Lane, Sheffield, from the Notts family group.

His name is carved in the great Thiepval memorial.

Four days later, Sgt Lionel Kipling of the East Lancashire regiment (Staindrop) was killed near La Boisselle on the Albert-Bapaume road. He is buried at Tincourt cemetery.

And in August, Arthur Kipling (also Notts) of the Machine Gun Corps was killed at Delville Wood. His name is also on the Thiepval memorial

RAF Kiplings

Juliette Kipling has kindly provided a copy of her grandfather's service record in the RAF. It can be seen that he was a boy entrant in 1936 (at age 16), served through the war in the ranks and successfully applied for a permanent commission in 1946, retiring as a Flight Lieutenant in 1961 after over 25 years' service.
